Electronic Distribution Information
Please check only one:

I authorize immediate access to the electronic full text of my work through ProQuest and DRUM

I request that the University of Maryland embargo (restrict) access to the electronic full text of my thesis or dissertation through DRUM for:

One (1) year   Six (6) years   Indefinitely*

an indefinite embargo requires written approval by the Dean of the Graduate School

By signing and submitting this agreement, I grant the University of Maryland a no cost, nonexclusive, right and license to include the scholarly material identified below in the Digital Repository at the University of Maryland ("DRUM"), and, through DRUM, to reproduce, publicly display, and distribute the material to users world-wide at no cost provided the University does not alter the content of the material.

I represent that I am the sole or joint owner of the entire copyright in the material or, to the extent that I do not hold copyright in any part of the material, I have the written authority from the owner of copyright to grant this license to the University of Maryland. If the material is based on work that was sponsored or supported by an agency or entity other than the University of Maryland, I represent that I have complied with any requirements the sponsor may have imposed on publication including a right of review or inclusion of an acknowledgement of sponsor support.

I acknowledge that I have reviewed the options for making my thesis or dissertation publicly available through DRUM and that I have discussed these options with my advisor. I understand that I must enter into a separate license agreement with ProQuest for my work to be included in its database.

Publishing Your Thesis or Dissertation:
ProQuest Theses and Dissertations & DRUM, the Digital Repository at the University of Maryland

Congratulations on finishing your doctoral dissertation or master's thesis. As a condition of graduation, your work must be published. You fulfill that condition by submitting your document in PDF form to the University for approval, archiving, and publication through the Graduate School and ProQuest's UMI Dissertation Publishing program. ProQuest will keep a copy of your work in its commercial electronic database, ProQuest Theses and Dissertations and the Libraries will keep a copy in the Digital Repository at the University of Maryland (DRUM), available at http://drum.lib.umd.edu. DRUM is an open-access archive through which others will be able to access your work at no charge. The submittal process is described in detail at http://www.gradschool.umd.edu/current_students/electronic_thesis_and_dissertations_at_um.html and in the University's ETD Style Guide, available at http://www.gradschool.umd.edu/current_students/etd_style_guide.html.

What is ProQuest?

ProQuest is a private company that maintains, through an arrangement with the Library of Congress, the bibliographic record for over 2 million master's theses and doctoral dissertations dating back to 1861. Those works are stored in the ProQuest Dissertations and Theses, a commercial full-text research database to which many university libraries subscribe. Nearly 700 institutions submit titles to the database. In signing the submission contract with ProQuest, you authorize ProQuest to host your work and sell it through its database and other online outlets. You are entitled to receive an annual royalty payment of 10% of all income ProQuest receives from the sale of your work, payable in each year that the accrued royalties reach $25.00.

Additionally, for a fee, ProQuest will register copyright in your work with the United States Copyright Office. Note that as the author you hold copyright in your work regardless of whether it is registered. Registration may be useful in deterring persons from infringing your copyright and will allow you to seek monetary damages in a copyright infringement law suit

What are the benefits of having my work available through ProQuest and DRUM?

- Your research can be found, read, and used by a global audience, including scholarly colleagues and potential publishers and employers.
- Your research can be found by most popular search engines, such as Google or Yahoo, as well as through special repository search engines.
- Increased accessibility to your research increases the chances of it being cited in other scholarly work.
- Access to your work is maintained with a permanent URL, to which you can refer and link from your CV, email messages, or web pages.

What are my choices regarding access?

As the owner of copyright in your work, you have the exclusive right to reproduce, distribute, make derivative works based on, publicly perform and display your work, and to authorize others to exercise some or all of those rights. The agreement you execute to submit your work to ProQuest and DRUM is your authorization to allow them to exercise some of your rights under copyright. When you submit your work to the Graduate School you will choose what level of access to allow to your work via ProQuest Dissertations and Theses and DRUM. Those options are:

A. Make your work available via ProQuest and DRUM as soon as it is received
The abstract and full text of your work will be present in ProQuest Dissertations and Theses for purchase, and   will be freely available and searchable online via DRUM.

B. Restrict online publication of your work for either 1 or 6 years
You may place an embargo (a restriction) on electronic access to your work through ProQuest Dissertations and Theses and DRUM for legitimate reasons. Patents or future publication, for example, might be jeopardized by providing unrestricted access (see below). Should you elect to restrict access to your work, your name, the title of your work, a description of your research, your advisor's name, and the abstract will be available via ProQuest and DRUM, but the full text version will not be available for viewing or download until the selected embargo period has passed.

C. Restrict online publication of your work indefinitely

You may place an indefinite embargo on your work. If you choose this option, your name, the title of your work, a description of your research, your advisor's name, and the abstract will be available via ProQuest and DRUM, but the full text version will not be available for viewing or download. This option requires the written approval of the Dean of the Graduate School. You may request the restriction be lifted at any time.

Publication and Patent Issues

Patenting:

Under U.S. patent laws, public dissemination of patentable information, such as through publication or a seminar, affects the deadline for filing for patent protection in the U.S. and may eliminate your ability to acquire foreign patent rights. As a result, if you intend to seek patent protection for material covered in your thesis or dissertation, you may wish to request a delay in publication through ProQuest and DRUM. A one-year embargo is usually sufficient for patent purposes.

The Office of Technology Commercialization (http://otc.umd.edu) may be able to help you with the patent process if you and the University jointly own the intellectual property rights in a patentable invention or if you as the sole owner of those rights assign them to the University. Consult the University of Maryland Policy on Intellectual Property, Sections VI and VII, at http://www.president.umd.edu/policies/iv320a.html.

Publishing:

Professional journals have policies regarding the publication of articles that were previously published and revised versions of previously published articles. You should consult the author guidelines on publisher web sites to whom you are likely to submit your work before you complete the Thesis and Dissertation Electronic Publication Form. A one-year embargo on electronic publication is sufficient to comply with most publishers' policies regarding pre-posting of material.

If you intend to publish your research as a monograph, the process will be more complicated and longer than the process for publishing a professional article based on your thesis or dissertation. Again, you should consult publishers' policies and guidelines to determine if they affect publication of your thesis or dissertation in ProQuest and DRUM. A six-year embargo on electronic distribution should provide adequate time for prior monograph publication.

If you have any questions concerning the availability of your work on ProQuest Dissertations and Theses or DRUM, please contact the UM Libraries' DRUM Team at drum-help@umd.edu or the Graduate School at gradschool@umd.edu.
